THE CARD GAME

Campaign Guide

THE FORGOTTEN AGE

Earth Is Not Ours

“Primal myth and modern delusion joined in their assumption that mankind is only one—perhaps the least—of the highly evolved and dominant races of this planet’s long and largely unknown career.”

— H. P. Lovecraft, “The Shadow out of Time”

The Forgotten Age is a campaign for Arkham Horror: The Card Game for 1–4 players. The Forgotten Age deluxe expansion contains two scenarios: “The Untamed Wilds” and “The Doom of Eztli.” These scenarios can be played on their own or combined with the six Mythos Packs in The Forgotten Age cycle to form a larger eight-part campaign.

Additional Rules and Clarifications

Seal

As an additional cost for a card with the seal keyword to enter play, its controller must search the chaos bag for the specified chaos token and place it on top of the card, thereby sealing it. If there is a choice of which token to seal, the card’s controller chooses. If the specified token is not in the chaos bag, the card cannot enter play.

A sealed chaos token is not considered to be in the chaos bag, and therefore cannot be revealed from the chaos bag as part of a skill test or ability.

When a chaos token is “released,” it is returned to the chaos bag and is no longer considered sealed. If a card with one or more chaos tokens sealed on it leaves play for any reason, any chaos tokens sealed on it are immediately released.

Some cards (with or without the seal keyword) may also have abilities that seal one or more chaos tokens as part of their effect. This is done following the same process as above: searching the chaos bag for the specified token, removing it from the chaos bag, and placing it on the card. If the specified token is not in the chaos bag, the effect fails.

Alert

Each time an investigator fails a skill test while attempting to evade an enemy with the alert keyword, after applying all results for that skill test, that enemy performs an attack against the evading investigator. An enemy does not exhaust after performing an alert attack. This attack occurs whether the enemy is engaged with the evading investigator or not.

Supplies

At certain points throughout The Forgotten Age campaign, investigators are given the opportunity to choose supplies to bring on their expeditions into the wilds. These supplies are recorded in the Campaign Log, under each investigator’s “Supplies” section.

Supplies are purchased with supply points, which are granted to investigators whenever they are given the opportunity to purchase supplies. Leftover supply points are not recorded, and are lost.

An investigator’s supplies will determine the possible options available during gameplay and throughout the story of this campaign. Each supply has no effect on its own. Some card effects, story options, and resolutions may change or become available depending on the supplies carried by the investigator(s).

Vengeance X

Some encounter cards are worth vengeance points. The text Vengeance X indicates that a card is worth X vengeance points.

Like Victory X, when an encounter card with Vengeance X is overcome by the investigators, it is stored in the victory display until the end of the scenario. However, unlike victory points, vengeance represents the awareness and animosity of the Father of Serpents, and it is generally a good idea to avoid accruing vengeance points whenever possible.

Vengeance points in the victory display have no impact upon the game unless specifically referenced by another encounter card.

- ☉ As an enemy with Vengeance X is defeated, place the card in the victory display instead of in the discard pile.
- ☉ At the end of a scenario, take each location with Vengeance X that is in play, revealed, and has no clues on it, and place it in the victory display.
- ☉ As a treachery card with Vengeance X completes its resolution, place it in the victory display instead of in the discard pile.
- ☉ Cards worth vengeance points are not also worth victory points unless the card has both Victory X and Vengeance X.

New Weaknesses

This expansion contains two new basic weaknesses—Dark Pact and Doomed—with the text “Campaign Mode only.” These weaknesses should only be added to the pool of available basic weaknesses when the investigators are playing in Campaign Mode.

Additionally, this expansion contains three new weaknesses—The Price of Failure, Accursed Fate, and The Bell Tolls—which are neither basic weaknesses nor scenario-specific weaknesses. These weaknesses are not added to the pool of available basic weaknesses, and should only be added to an investigator’s deck if another card instructs the players to do so.

Explore

Some abilities in this campaign are identified with an Explore action designator. Such abilities are generally used to find new locations to put into play, and are initiated using the “activate” action.

Explore abilities instruct you to draw the top card of the “exploration deck,” which is a separate deck that is constructed during the setup of some scenarios. This deck consists of several single-sided locations and treachery cards.

- ☉ Each Explore ability indicates a particular type of location that you are seeking to draw. If a location of that type is drawn, it is put into play, and you move to that location. This is considered a “successful” exploration.
- ☉ If any other location is drawn, place it next to the exploration deck, and draw the next card from the exploration deck. Repeat this process until a location of the indicated type is drawn, or a treachery is drawn. After this action has ended, shuffle each location next to the exploration deck back into the exploration deck.
- ☉ If a treachery card is drawn, it is resolved as normal. If it is discarded, place it in the encounter discard pile as you would normally. There is no discard pile for the exploration deck. This is considered an “unsuccessful” exploration.
- ☉ As a single-sided location is put into play from the exploration deck, place clues on that location equal to its clue value.

Example: Agenda 1a—“Expedition into the Wild” has the following ability: “➔: Explore. Draw the top card of the exploration deck. If it is a connecting location, put it into play and move to it.” Ursula Downs is at the Expedition Camp and wishes to find a new location to travel to. She spends her first action to explore, drawing the top card of the exploration deck. The card she draws is Circuitous Trail. Because Circuitous Trail is a location that is not connected to the Expedition Camp, it is placed next to the exploration deck, and Ursula draws the next card in the exploration deck. This time, she draws the Low on Supplies treachery card, which she resolves as normal and places in the encounter discard pile. Her exploration is unsuccessful, and she must shuffle the Circuitous Trail that she drew previously back into the exploration deck. Ursula decides to explore one more time, spending a second action. This time, she draws Path of Thorns, which is connected to the Expedition Camp. Her exploration is successful. Path of Thorns is put into play with clues on it equal to its clue value, and Ursula immediately moves from the Expedition Camp to the Path of Thorns.

Prologue

Tuesday, June 2nd, 1925

There will be no rest for us this summer, it seems.

Today I met with Harlan Earnstone, a historical theorist at Miskatonic University and an old friend of mine. He'd said he had a job offer for me, but frankly, I didn't know what to expect.

Harlan introduced me to an associate of his: Alejandro Vela, a distinguished historian from across the southern border. Mr. Vela is a graduate of a prestigious university in Mexico City, and has spent many years researching the Aztec Empire. He claims that he has found evidence regarding the existence of an unheard-of Aztec city-state called Eztli. His strange and unprecedented findings were not accepted by the university, and he's become a pariah among his peers.

Alejandro came to Arkham to seek funding for an expedition into the rainforests of southern Mexico, where he believes that the ruins of the Eztli altepetl lie undiscovered. His description of this city-state's origins defies modern understanding of Mesoamerican history. Despite this—or, knowing my old friend, because of this—Harlan is enthralled by Alejandro's discoveries. Miskatonic University has agreed to fund the expedition (albeit meagerly), and Harlan wants me to go along.

The way I see it, there's a good chance we're looking for something that doesn't even exist. But if there's even a slight chance these Eztli people existed, the historical significance would be profound. We debated the issue for some time, but in the end, we accepted Alejandro's offer. Preparations are underway, and we should be setting off by the end of the month. With any luck, we'll have this journal filled with all manner of interesting discoveries. If not, perhaps it'll be a nice wedge to place beneath Harlan's lopsided desk.

- ☞ If Ursula Downs, Leo Anderson, or Monterey Jack was chosen as an investigator for this campaign: Choose one of those investigators to be the expedition leader. That investigator begins Scenarios I and II as the lead investigator.

As an outcast from academia, funding for Alejandro's expedition is limited. Each investigator must choose supplies to bring for the expedition. In the Campaign Log, under each investigator's "Supplies" section, record the supplies that investigator chose to bring. (Note: Provisions and Medicine can be taken more than once by recording their name multiple times and spending the appropriate number of supply points each time.)

Each investigator may spend supply points to purchase one or more of the supplies listed below. The number of supply points available to each investigator is based on the number of investigators in the campaign:

1 investigator: 10 supply points

2 investigators: 7 supply points each

3 investigators: 5 supply points each

4 investigators: 4 supply points each

The description of each supply below gives some insight into how it might be used during the campaign. Choose wisely.

Available supplies:

- Provisions (1 supply point each): Food and water for one person. A must-have for any journey.
- Medicine (2 supply points each): To stave off disease, infection, or venom.
- Rope (3 supply points): Several long coils of strong rope. Vital for climbing and spelunking.
- Blanket (2 supply points): For warmth at night.
- Canteen (2 supply points): Can be refilled at streams and rivers.
- Torches (3 supply points): Can light up dark areas, or set sconces alight.
- Compass (2 supply points): Can guide you when you are hopelessly lost.
- Map (3 supply points): Unmarked for now, but with time, you may be able to map out your surroundings.
- Binoculars (2 supply points): To help you see faraway places.
- Chalk (2 supply points): For writing on rough stone surfaces.
- Pendant (1 supply point): Useless, but fond memories bring comfort to travelers far from home.

Scenario I: The Untamed Wilds

Sunday, June 28th, 1925

It's been a hell of a day. We've just set up camp along the northern border of the rainforest where Alejandro believes the Eztli once dwelled. The jungle here is dense and untamed. The sky hides above the tree cover, but I can tell from the crisp breeze that storm clouds are brewing overhead.

The dangers of our expedition have been explained to us many times. We are hundreds of miles away from any sign of civilization. Nobody in modern times has yet to pierce the heart of these wilds. Until now, nobody has had reason to try. After all, it wouldn't make sense to find Aztec ruins in this region of Mexico. And yet, here we are: looking for ruins that may not exist in a place where, by all accounts, they should not.

Already one of our surveyors has fallen ill, and another has been bitten by a viper. I'm starting to think the rainforest doesn't want us here. If this luck persists, ours will be the shortest expedition in Miskatonic University's history. Tonight, we rest. Tomorrow, we venture into uncharted wilds.

Setup

Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Untamed Wilds, Rainforest, Serpents, Expedition, Guardians of Time, Agents of Yig, Poison, and Ancient Evils. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

Put the Expedition Camp into play. Each investigator begins play at the Expedition Camp.

Create the exploration deck. This is done by taking the five single-sided Jungle locations and shuffling them together, along with one copy each of the following treachery cards: Lost in the Wilds, Overgrowth, Snake Bite, Low on Supplies, and Arrows from the Trees.

Set the following cards aside, out of play: The three single-sided Ruins locations, the Agents of Yig encounter set, the four Poisoned weaknesses, the Alejandro Vela asset, and the Ichtaca enemy. The Agents of Yig encounter set can be identified by this icon:

Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

DO NOT READ until the end of the scenario

If no resolution was reached (each investigator resigned or was defeated):

Wednesday, July 1st, 1925

I still have no idea how we made it back to camp alive.

The jungle was more perilous than we could have possibly imagined. This may read like the ravings of a lunatic, but I cannot explain it any other way. Being lost in the jungle was no picnic, but that was the least of our worries. The rainforest was guarded. Guarded by unfathomable horrors: serpentine creatures driven by anger and hate, hunting us relentlessly.

Perhaps just as deadly were the human natives of the rainforest. They appeared to be Aztec warriors as far as dress and speech were concerned. Despite the conquering of the Aztec people hundreds of years ago, these warriors somehow survived. How they managed to remain undiscovered this long is beyond us. I thought Alejandro would be excited to learn more about them, but he was more disturbed than fascinated. I suppose he has a right to be incredulous. Nothing about this expedition makes sense.

The serpent creatures chased us for what seemed like days. Finally we were able to find our way back to camp, but the price was steep. We had lost all progress we had made, and many of us were injured or afflicted by serpent venom. We have no choice but to send runners to the nearest city for additional supplies and to wait and recover from our wounds.

- ☉ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators were forced to wait for additional supplies.
- ☉ If it was act 1 or 2 when the scenario ended:
  - ◆ Record in your Campaign Log that Ichtaca observed your progress with keen interest.
  - ◆ Record in your Campaign Log that Alejandro followed the investigators into the ruins. Any one investigator may choose to add Alejandro Vela to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator's deck size.

☉ If "you fought with Ichtaca":

- ◆ Record in your Campaign Log that Ichtaca is wary of the investigators.
- ◆ Record in your Campaign Log that Alejandro followed the investigators into the ruins. Any one investigator may choose to add Alejandro Vela to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator's deck size.

☉ If "Ichtaca is leading the way":

- ◆ Record in your Campaign Log that the investigators have earned Ichtaca's trust.
- ◆ Record in your Campaign Log that Alejandro chose to remain at camp. Do not add Alejandro Vela to any investigator's deck.

☉ For each vengeance point in the victory display, record one tally mark under "Yig's Fury" in your Campaign Log. Beware the anger of the Father of Serpents, as his fury will haunt you in the future.

☉ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 1:

Thursday, July 2nd, 1925

Somehow, after much toil and many hours of exploration, we found the ruins that Alejandro sought, though we scarcely could have been ready for what we encountered in the wilds of the jungle. The rainforest was guarded. Guarded by unfathomable horrors: serpentine creatures driven by anger and hate. They hunted us relentlessly, wielding primitive weaponry and communicating in sharp hisses.

*Perhaps just as deadly were the human natives of the rainforest. They appeared to be Aztec warriors as far as dress and speech were concerned. Despite the conquering of the Aztec people hundreds of years ago, these warriors somehow survived. How they managed to remain undiscovered this long is beyond us. The warrior named Ichtaca was particularly intriguing. We were able to defuse the initial encounter with her, and surprisingly, she helped guide us through the jungle,* only to disappear mysteriously when we reached the ruins. I have a feeling we have not seen the last of her.

Alejandro did not agree with our decision to trust the Eztli warriors. He's decided to stay at camp until further notice, disturbed as he is by their presence. I thought he would be excited to learn more about them, but I expect this discovery defies even his broad-minded theories. I suppose he has a right to be distrustful. Nothing about this expedition makes sense.

We have cleared a route to what Alejandro believes is the main temple of the ruins. There is little time to rest. The serpent creatures seem intent on stopping us, so we cannot tarry any longer than necessary. Soon we will enter the ruins to see what secrets they hide.

- ☉ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators cleared a path to the Eztli ruins.
- ☉ Record in your Campaign Log that Alejandro chose to remain at camp. Do not add Alejandro Vela to any investigator's deck.
- ☉ Record in your Campaign Log that the investigators have earned Ichtaca's trust.
- ☉ For each vengeance point in the victory display, record one tally mark under "Yig's Fury" in your Campaign Log. Beware the anger of the Father of Serpents, as his fury will haunt you in the future.
- ☉ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 2:

Thursday, July 2nd, 1925

Somehow, after much toil and many hours of exploration, we found the ruins that Alejandro sought, though we scarcely could have been ready for what we encountered in the wilds of the jungle. The rainforest was guarded. Guarded by unfathomable horrors: serpentine creatures driven by anger and hate. They hunted us relentlessly, wielding primitive weaponry and communicating in sharp hisses.

Perhaps just as deadly were the human natives of the rainforest. They appeared to be Aztec warriors as far as dress and speech were concerned. Despite the conquering of the Aztec people hundreds of years ago, these warriors somehow survived. How they managed to remain undiscovered this long is beyond us. I thought Alejandro would be excited to learn more about them, but he shared our alarm. We managed to fend off and interrogate their leader, a warrior named Ichtaca. Before she fled, she warned us to not go near the ruins. Unfortunately for her, we refuse to go home empty-handed.

With Alejandro leading the way, we've cleared a route to what he believes is the main temple of the ruins. There is little time to rest. The serpent creatures seem intent on stopping us, so we cannot tarry any longer than necessary. Soon we will enter the ruins to see what secrets they hide.

- ☉ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators cleared a path to the Eztli ruins.

- ☉ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Interlude I: Restless Nights

In order, read each of the following sections:

Check your supplies. Each investigator with a blanket reads Restful Sleep. The rest read Tossing and Turning.

Restful Sleep: Mercifully, I was able to sleep through each night. However, while my body rested, my mind was plagued by nightmares. A cavern like a gaping maw, bathed in dim red light... the walls slithering with the glimmering scales of a hundred vipers... it might have been better had I not slept at all.

You suffer no ill effects.

Tossing and Turning: Those nights in the jungle, I barely slept. A strange fog rolled through the camp each night, plunging the area in an intense and peculiar cold. My bedroll offered some protection against the elements, but we hadn't been prepared for this unnatural weather. Flies and mosquitoes buzzed in my ears every time I began to drift off. Even when I finally slept, I would soon be startled awake by the crawling of an insect or lizard across my face. I wager I'll get very little sleep on this journey...

You suffer 1 physical or mental trauma (your choice).

Check your supplies. The investigators, as a group, must cross off one provisions per investigator from their supplies. For each provisions they cannot cross off, choose an investigator to read Low on Rations.

Low on Rations: We thought we'd brought enough food and water for everybody, but the journey had taken its toll on our supplies. When the sun rose and it came time to eat, we discovered we were already running out of provisions.

You begin the next scenario with 3 fewer resources.

The lead investigator must choose one investigator to be the group's lookout. Then, that investigator checks his or her supplies. If he or she has binoculars, he or she reads Shapes in the Trees. Otherwise, he or she reads Eyes in the Dark.

Shapes in the Trees: Most of the nights passed without incident, but on this night, I was startled by the rustling of tree branches along the southern border of our camp's clearing. Despite the darkness, I was able to use my binoculars to see shapes moving in the trees. The shapes appeared human, but... why? Why do they only watch us from afar? What is their purpose?

You earn 2 additional experience as you gain further insight into the motivations of the Eztli.

Eyes in the Dark: Each night, I was watched. I didn't just feel watched: I saw the eyes peering out from the inky darkness that surrounded our camp. They knew we were there. The yellow eyes watched me, alert, my weapons drawn, ready to defend the camp if the need arose. Our eyes met, and a darkness seized my heart.

You suffer 1 mental trauma.

Check your supplies. Each investigator with medicine may cross it off from their supplies to choose and remove a Poisoned weakness from any investigator's deck. Each investigator who still has a Poisoned weakness in his or her deck reads The Poison Spreads.

The Poison Spreads: As the days went by, the poison continued to spread through my body. By the second night, my skin was drenched in sweat. I started having difficulty breathing, and I began every morning by retching up most of the previous night's dinner.

You suffer 1 physical trauma.

Scenario II: The Doom of Eztli

Check Campaign Log. If the investigators were forced to wait for additional supplies: Read Intro 1.

If the investigators cleared a path to the Eztli ruins: Skip to Intro 2.

Intro 1:

Wednesday, July 8th, 1925

Our runners, José and Maria, returned several days later. They were fully stocked with food, water, aspirin, and weapons. I am curious how deep Alejandro's connections are in Mexico. For an outcast historian, he was able to secure guns and ammunition faster than I had anticipated. But perhaps it is better if he keeps his sources undisclosed.

We ventured once more into the jungle. This time, we were prepared. We had learned from our previous excursion, and we made our way across the river canyon, venturing deeper south than we had dared before. Eventually we reached the ruins Alejandro sought, and soon we will enter what Alejandro believes is the main temple. Strangely, the serpent creatures we encountered earlier didn't attack in force as we had feared. Could they have fled? Or are they simply lying in wait, preparing to ambush while we sleep at night?

Proceed to Setup.

Intro 2:

Friday, July 3rd, 1925

We spent most of yesterday moving our camp to the edge of the ruins. With the serpentine creatures still guarding the region, we have decided that a small party will have the best chance of slipping into the main temple unnoticed. I told Maria, the expedition's naturalist, to take one of the trucks and wait beyond the northern edge of the rainforest. Our cartographer, José, is guarding the camp until we return. We're on our own, but at least we've cleared an escape route in the event things go sour...

Proceed to Setup.

Setup

- ① Gather all cards from the following encounter sets: The Doom of Eztli, Agents of Yig, Yig's Venom, Temporal Flux, Deadly Traps, Forgotten Ruins, Poison, and Chilling Cold. These sets are indicated by the following icons:

- ② Put the Entryway into play. Each investigator begins play in the Entryway.
- ③ Create the exploration deck. This is done by taking the five single-sided Ancient locations and shuffling them together, along with one copy each of the following treachery cards: Ill Omen, Deep Dark, Final Mistake, Entombed, and Crypt Chill.
- ④ Set the following cards aside, out of play: The Harbinger of Valusia enemy, the Chamber of Time location, and the Relic of Ages asset.
- ⑤ Set aside each Poisoned weakness that is not already in an investigator's deck.
- ⑥ Shuffle the remainder of the encounter cards to build the encounter deck.

Standalone Mode

If you are playing in Standalone Mode and do not wish to refer to any other setups or resolutions, you may use the information below when setting up this scenario:

- ① Assemble the chaos bag using the following tokens: +1, 0, 0, 0, -1, -2, -2, -3, -5, , , , , , .
- ② The investigators cleared a path to the Eztli ruins.
- ③ You have no supplies.

DO NOT READ until the end of the scenario

Before resolving any other resolution, if at least one investigator was defeated: The defeated investigators read Investigator Defeat first.

Investigator Defeat: The temple shakes with the ferocity of an earthquake, causing you to collapse to the ground. Serpent creatures emerge from the shadows around you, surrounding you completely. The thought, "This is how it ends," flashes through your mind. For a moment, you contemplate the absurdity of your death. You can only hope that nobody else will be foolish enough to try to explore these forsaken ruins.

- ① Check Campaign Log. If there are four or more tally marks under "Yig's Fury": The creatures are upon you before you have time to react. You scream in agony as you are skewered by razor-sharp spears.
  - ❖ Each investigator who was defeated is killed. (If there are not enough investigators to continue the campaign, the campaign is over and the players lose.)
  - ❖ If another resolution was reached, the remaining investigators proceed to that resolution.
  - ❖ If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated): Go to Resolution 2.
- ② If there are three or fewer tally marks under "Yig's Fury": Suddenly, a distant voice hisses to the others, and the serpents tentatively retreat into the darkness. You run for your life, not taking any chances.
  - ❖ Record three tally marks under "Yig's Fury."
  - ❖ If another resolution was reached, the remaining investigators proceed to that resolution.
  - ❖ If no resolution was reached (each investigator was defeated): Go to Resolution 3.

If no resolution was reached because each investigator resigned before act 3: Go to Resolution 3.

Resolution 1 (each defeated investigator should resolve Investigator Defeat first):

The outside of the temple ruins appeared Aztec in origin, but once we breached the interior, it became clear that these buildings had a very different and inhuman origin. The ruins were alive. The grooves in the walls were illuminated as though powered by electricity, and a faint hum of energy reverberated throughout the halls. In spite of the serpent creatures, we were able to reach a hidden passage that led deeper underground.

In the central chamber of these underground halls, we found our prize: a steel orb of unknown origin, gently humming and glowing with a dim blue light. It was attached delicately to a bronze frame, appearing almost religious in its significance, and we knew it could not have been made by the Aztecs.

With the artifact in tow, we fled the ruins. The building had started to crumble around us, as though the orb was the only thing keeping it standing. Had it been powering the ruins, like a battery? What exactly was this device that the serpents guarded so fervently?

Maria was waiting for us with the trucks when we finally reached the northern edge of the rainforest. We're getting the hell out of this serpent-infested jungle while we still can.

- ③ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators recovered the Relic of Ages. One investigator must add the Relic of Ages to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator's deck size.
- ④ If the Harbinger of Valusia is still in play or set aside, record in your Campaign Log that the Harbinger is still alive. Next to this, in parentheses, record how much damage is on the Harbinger of Valusia.
- ⑤ For each vengeance point in the victory display, record one tally mark under "Yig's Fury" in your Campaign Log.
- ⑥ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 2:

It is not in my nature to leave a thing unfinished. For the sake of my fallen comrades, I have taken it upon myself to record the remainder of our expedition in this journal.

The others never made it out of the temple. I convinced two of the other members of the expedition, José and Andrea, to venture in after the others... But now I fear a terrible fate has befallen them, as well.

Thankfully, my gambit was worthwhile. While José and Andrea searched for the others, I snuck into the temple and took a different route. Having seen what we have seen, knowing what we know now, I couldn't have returned to the university without evidence of our discovery. While the serpent creatures were distracted, I was able to reach a hidden passageway that led deeper underground.

In the central chamber of these underground halls, I found the device. The orb was made of an unnatural steel, attached delicately to its bronze frame. It pulsed with power in my hands and glowed with a dim blue light. Any fool could tell that it was not made by the Aztecs, but the other members of the expedition could not even begin to understand its true significance. The ruins started to crumble around me as I left, but it mattered not. The relic was all that mattered now.

With the artifact in tow, I returned to camp and told the others it was time to depart. Maria was waiting for us with the trucks when we finally reached the northern edge of the jungle. Now we are headed to Texas, where we will cross the border into the United States.

It is a shame what happened to the others. Their sacrifice will not be in vain. Now, my work can continue.

– Alejandro Vela

- ☉ In your Campaign Log, record that Alejandro recovered the Relic of Ages.
- ☉ If the Harbinger of Valusia is still in play or set aside, record in your Campaign Log that the Harbinger is still alive. Next to this, in parentheses, record how much damage is on the Harbinger of Valusia.

- ☉ For each vengeance point in the victory display, record one tally mark under “Yig’s Fury” in your Campaign Log.
- ☉ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Resolution 3 (each defeated investigator should resolve Investigator Defeat first):

This was a mistake. This was all a terrible mistake. We escaped the temple with our lives, but not a moment too soon. The ruins were alive. It was as though the walls knew of our intrusion, hated us for our presence. Wanted us out. Wanted us dead.

We have gathered outside the temple where José is waiting for us. Alejandro, unwilling to return home empty-handed, wants us to go back inside. We must decide what to do next.

The investigators must decide (choose one):

- ☉ “We can’t stop now—we have to go back inside!” Proceed to Resolution 4.
- ☉ “It’s too dangerous. This place must be destroyed.” Proceed to Resolution 5.

Resolution 4:

We’ve made our decision. Alejandro is right: we’ve come too far to back down now. Our plan is to regroup and head back into the temple once more. Even from here, we can tell that the layout of the temple has warped and changed. The ruins seem to have reset to their dormant state. With any luck, we’ll make it out this time...

- ☉ The investigators must replay Scenario II: The Doom of Eztli. Reset the game to this scenario’s Setup. Do not record anything in your Campaign Log except for any trauma suffered from your previous game. No experience points are earned from your previous game.
- ☉ Any player whose investigator was killed or driven insane must choose a new investigator to play, as normal.

Resolution 5:

We made our decision. There was no way we were going back into that deathtrap. Thankfully, there was another way. José had brought some TNT from the trucks, and there was more than enough to level the damned place.

That night, we put on a hell of a fireworks show. The jungle protested. Birds scattered into the sky, the ground rumbled, and hateful snarls surrounded our camp. But the dynamite did its job. Once the dust settled, we began sifting through the debris in search of anything with historical or cultural significance we could bring back to Arkham.

José was the first to notice the blue light peeking out from underneath the remains of the temple. The rays grew in intensity with each passing moment. As we started clearing the rubble in order to discover the source of the light, there was a sudden flash, and the debris at the center of the ruins scattered. A steel orb of unknown origin lay on top of the rubble, gently humming. It was attached delicately to a bronze frame, appearing almost religious in its significance. The blue glow emanating from the device dimmed as I touched it. There was no way a device like this was built by the Aztecs.

With the artifact in tow, we left the smoldering temple behind us. We had outstayed our welcome in this rainforest, and we knew it. Around us, the jungle hissed. The ground slithered and crawled with snakes. In the darkness, we heard shouts in a language we could not understand. There was no time to pack up camp; we ran as soon as we had the chance. Andrea was struck in her throat by a black-feathered arrow, her startled scream captured in grim perpetuity. José was grabbed by a giant boa as we fled north into the river canyon. His neck snapped before we could reach him.

Maria was waiting for us with the trucks when we finally reached the northern edge of the jungle. We didn't stop until we crossed into Mexico City. Even now I do not feel safe: who could, after seeing what we have seen?

To hell with the Eztli and to hell with this forsaken place.

- ☉ In your Campaign Log, record that the investigators recovered the Relic of Ages. One investigator must add the Relic of Ages to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator's deck size.
  - ☉ If the Harbinger of Valusia is still in play or set aside, record in your Campaign Log that the Harbinger is still alive. Next to this, in parentheses, record how much damage is on the Harbinger of Valusia.
  - ☉ For each vengeance point in the victory display, record one tally mark under "Yig's Fury" in your Campaign Log. Record an additional ten tally marks, as you have angered Yig with your foolish actions.
- ☉ Each investigator earns experience equal to the Victory X value of each card in the victory display.

Expedition's End 1:

Friday, July 17th, 1925

We have finally made it back to Arkham, our expedition a "success." Alejandro is excited to report his findings to the university. How he maintains his starry-eyed idealism after the hell we went through in the jungle is beyond me. His attention is fixated on the strange relic that we discovered in the ruins. I wish we knew a little more about the artifact's origins. It unsettles me greatly. It hums at all times and pulses with an otherworldly energy I can scarcely describe. As we traveled home with the artifact in tow, our nights were plagued by bizarre nightmares: dreams of other worlds and civilizations.

Alejandro wants to bring the relic to the Miskatonic Museum, to put on display along with the other Eztli artifacts we discovered. My feelings are mixed. At the museum, it will receive proper care, and historians will be able to study it and perhaps even discern its purpose. However, I fear that the relic may be too dangerous for the public. After all, we still have no idea what the damned thing even is. Alejandro would hate it, but perhaps it would be better to keep the relic somewhere safe, where Harlan and I can study it in private. I'll have to decide tonight; after tomorrow, there won't be time to change my mind...

☞ The lead investigator must decide (choose one):

- ◆ It belongs in a museum. Alejandro and the museum staff will be able to study it and learn more about its purpose.
Proceed to Expedition's End 2.
- ◆ It is too dangerous to be on display. We should keep it hidden and safe until we know more about it.
Skip to Expedition's End 3.

Expedition's End 2:

Sunday, July 19th, 1925

I've decided to give custody of the relic to Alejandro. This entire expedition was based on his research, after all—he should be the one to study it. If anyone can discover the relic's secrets, it's him.

The relic is to be the centerpiece of a new exhibit at the museum. Alejandro has already written extensively about our discoveries, but his work has only just begun. Many mysteries about our expedition remain. How have the Eztli people remained undiscovered for so long? Why did they appear to be guarding the jungle, and from what? Who really built the temple ruins we explored? I have no doubt Alejandro will uncover the answers to these questions, given enough time.

As for me, my role in this endeavor has ended. However, I have yet to relax. My thoughts are constantly in the jungle—serpentine figures in the shadows, obsidian arrows embedded in skeletal bodies, malformed voices shrieking in the cavernous depths. When I walk through the streets, I find myself drawn toward the museum without realizing it, as though possessed to see the relic once again. There is a nagging sensation in the back of my mind, as though we have forgotten something important. What must I do to rid myself of—

(The journal entry ends abruptly.)

- ☞ Record in your Campaign Log that the investigators gave custody of the relic to Alejandro.
- ☞ Record in your Campaign Log that the investigators have earned Alejandro's trust. If it is not already in an investigator's deck, any one investigator may choose to add Alejandro Vela to his or her deck. This card does not count toward that investigator's deck size.
- ☞ Add 1  token to the chaos bag for the remainder of the campaign.
- ☞ Skip to Expedition's End 4.

Expedition's End 3:

Sunday, July 19th, 1925

I've decided to keep the relic hidden for now. Alejandro is not happy with my decision, but until we know what the orb is capable of, it's important that it stay somewhere safe, where it won't endanger others. Harlan agrees with me, and has offered to take custody of the relic and keep it in his private office. There, we can study the artifact in secret.

Alejandro is staying in Arkham for the time being, recording his notes about the expedition and helping the museum put together an exhibit displaying our other, less dangerous discoveries. As for me, I hope to find answers to other mysteries: How have the Eztli people remained undiscovered for so long? Why did they appear to be guarding the jungle, and from what? Who really built the temple ruins we explored?

My thoughts are constantly in the jungle—serpentine figures in the shadows, obsidian arrows embedded in skeletal bodies, malformed voices shrieking in the cavernous depths. Each time I leave Harlan's office, I find myself longing to head back and gaze upon the relic once more. There is a nagging sensation in the back of my mind, as though we have forgotten something important. What must I do to rid myself of—

(The journal entry ends abruptly.)

- 🕒 Record in your Campaign Log that the investigators gave custody of the relic to Harlan Earnstone.
- 🕒 Record in your Campaign Log that Alejandro is continuing his research on his own. If Alejandro Vela is currently in an investigator's deck, remove him from that investigator's deck.
- 🕒 Proceed to Expedition's End 4.

Expedition's End 4:

You drop your pen as a loud knocking at the door startles you, and you jump to your feet. It is almost 2:30 in the morning. Who could possibly be at your door at this hour? Your thoughts wander again to the jungle, and you are faced with a vision of serpent-creatures attacking you in your own home. Shuddering, you find a weapon and approach the front door carefully, ready to strike if need be. You take a long breath and open the door.

On the other side is a familiar woman with brown skin, long brown hair, and piercing yellow eyes set in a hard glare. Though her attire has changed, you recognize her instantly as Ichtaca, the Eztli warrior you encountered in the rainforest. Wearing a long coat and a Bollman hat, she is visibly uncomfortable in her shoes. Her jaw is set in anger. You are about to raise your weapon in defense when she lets out a heavy sigh and walks slowly over the threshold of your home, shutting your front door behind her. "Whatever you did, you have to reverse it," she intones darkly. "Or we will all cease to exist."

The story continues in Scenario III: Threads of Fate.

Expedition's End 5: Harlan Earnstone paces across your living room, dabbing his wrinkled forehead with his handkerchief. "It's my fault. I should never have encouraged them to go on that dreadful expedition." Though your paths have only crossed a few times before, Mr. Earnstone has become a valuable contact of yours within Miskatonic University. When the University's latest expedition returned with only a few survivors and a handful of strange, archaic artifacts, he came to you for advice.

"I know, I know. I should at least take solace in the fact that the expedition was successful, despite its heavy losses. Alejandro was right all along. The Eztli people are real. And yet... I am concerned about some of these findings." Harlan pulls a small leather-bound journal from his suitcase and hands it to you. "Before the expedition leader's tragic death, the leader recorded many of the group's discoveries in this journal. One of the surviving members of the expedition managed to grab it from the camp before fleeing the jungle. I think if you read these entries, you'll understand what I mean. The things they experienced, the creatures they encountered..." Harlan shudders and adjusts his glasses with too-shaky hands. "I am concerned not only for Alejandro, but for all of us. Read this journal, and if you can, please keep an eye on my colleague." You agree to help, but his worry does not fade. "I only hope that I am not damning you to a similar fate by asking for your aid."

You spend the remainder of that night studying the expedition journal, your mind swimming with thoughts of strange serpent-creatures and Aztec warriors. Long after Harlan has left, a loud knocking at the door startles you, and you jump to your feet. It is almost 2:30 in the morning. Who could possibly be at your door at this hour? You open the front door warily. On the other side is a woman with brown skin, long brown hair, and piercing yellow eyes set in a hard glare. She wears a long coat and a Bollman-style hat, visibly uncomfortable in her shoes. Her jaw is set in anger. A sudden flash of insight crosses your mind, and you realize at once who she must be. After all, you've read and re-read the journal's description of Ichtaca, the Eztli warrior. She lets out a heavy sigh and walks slowly over the threshold of your home, shutting your front door behind her. "Whatever they did, you have to reverse it," she intones darkly. "Or we will all cease to exist."

The story continues in Scenario III: Threads of Fate.
